Report

Chapo Trap House provides commentary on the following issues: the coup against president Evo Morales in Bolivia; a libertarian spree shooter in Chile; the entrance of diminutive billionaire Michael Bloomberg into the Democratic presidential primaries; Bill Gates and his money; whether Democratic presidential candidates should "try harder", or something; the ongoing beatz

Trump did get $2B or whatever worth of free media coverage, so the song he paid was really pitchy and he forgot half the lyrics.

Maybe Bernie doesn't appeal to voters, but he sure does appeal to that 45% of Americans who didn't vote in 2016.

Even more idiotic than these columnists overreacting to one poll is the idea that somehow anything that suggests that the sitting President is going to have a chance at reelection is scary. He already won once. It's not shocking that he's polling favorably in swing states.

This is true. I know a Trump person and what he seems to despise about Philadelphia Mayor Jim Kenney is the soda tax and the cigarette tax. For Trump people this is a gigantic issue. They want their soda and their smokes and don't fucking care about funding shitty public schools full of children that they'd rather not think about anyway.

This nutter couldn't get along with the three other Libertarians who joined him in Chile to set up their own compound so he had to start his own. And he lost an election bid thanks in part to a DV charge. Every fucking box....
